Re: Introducing Adam Strachota, ANSI-ASQ National Accreditation Board Management Systems Group Leader

I am pleased to introduce the ANSI-ASQ National Accreditation Board's newest employee, Adam Strachota.

Adam was recently hired as our Management Systems Group Leader for both brands, ANAB and ACLASS.

Adam's three main responsibilities are overseeing the accreditation coordinators, managing EQM, and serving as our company's (internal) management representative.

Adam started in early March and came to us from a local Milwaukee aerospace manufacturing company, where he was the operations manager. Adam has a bachelor's degree in production operations management and finance from the University of Wisconsin.

Adam works from both of our offices (in Milwaukee and Alexandria, VA) and reports to me; however, he will work very closely with our company vice presidents, Randy Dougherty (ANAB) and Keith Greenaway (ACLASS).

Adam is currently in training but he has taken over the role of managing the accreditation coordinators, so you may have already spoken to him or may in the future while working with your coordinator.

While Adam begins to take over many operational responsibilities, I will continue to be a technical resource for you in addition to your EATL and Randy.

Please join me in welcoming Adam to the ANSI-ASQ National Accreditation Board. His contact info is:
